Any claim for depreciation must be supported by a quantity surveyors report for buildings constructed after July 1985 – there are special rates for construction prior to this date. If you do not have a quantity surveyors report, a company we use is Depreciator Tax Depreciation Schedules –just mention we sent you.

The cost base of a rental property acquired after 7.30pm on 13 May 1997 must be reduced by any building write-off the taxpayer was eligible to claim, even where no claim was actually made. Hence if you have not claimed it, you should seriously consider claiming it. Contact this office for further details.

There are new ATO restrictions for claiming 'previously used' or second-hand depreciation deductions from 1 July 2017. This will apply to residential rental properties acquired, or first used as a rental property, on or after 9 May 2017.

Travel expenditure to inspect the property, collect rents from tenants, prepare the property for incoming tenants, maintain and/or undertake repairs to the property and undertake improvements is no longer deductible.

CAUTION: The ATO has a continuing crackdown on rental property expense claims. For the 2022 tax year they will be taking greater than normal interest due to expected larger losses due to COVID19. Please make sure you have kept relevant receipts and records for claims.

The areas that the ATO are focusing on are:

1. Initial capital improvements claimed as repairs
2. Repairs – key area the ATO will look at and Sundry expenses
3. Loan interest and other costs being claimed while the property is not available for rent
4. Taxpayers are estimating their own construction costs instead of relying on an independent qualified person
5. Claiming interest on loans that are not directly related to the property purchase
